QUANTUM BELIEFS

ANATOMY OF THE COGNITIVE QUBIT™

Cognitive Qubit: a formal visual model of a human belief state. Illustrates amplitude, phase, and coherence. Amplitude is the level of acceptance one believes a concept to be true, Phase is the framing of how a concept is presented. And coherence is the degree of acceptance consistency one has for a given concept or belief.

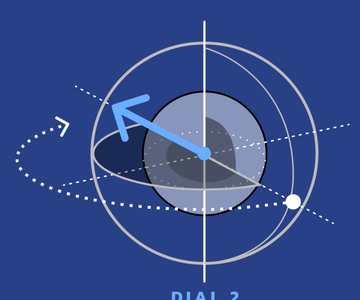
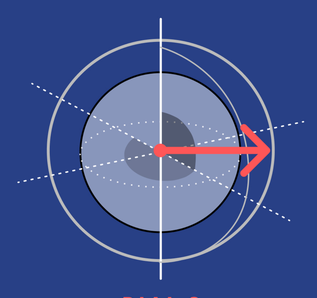
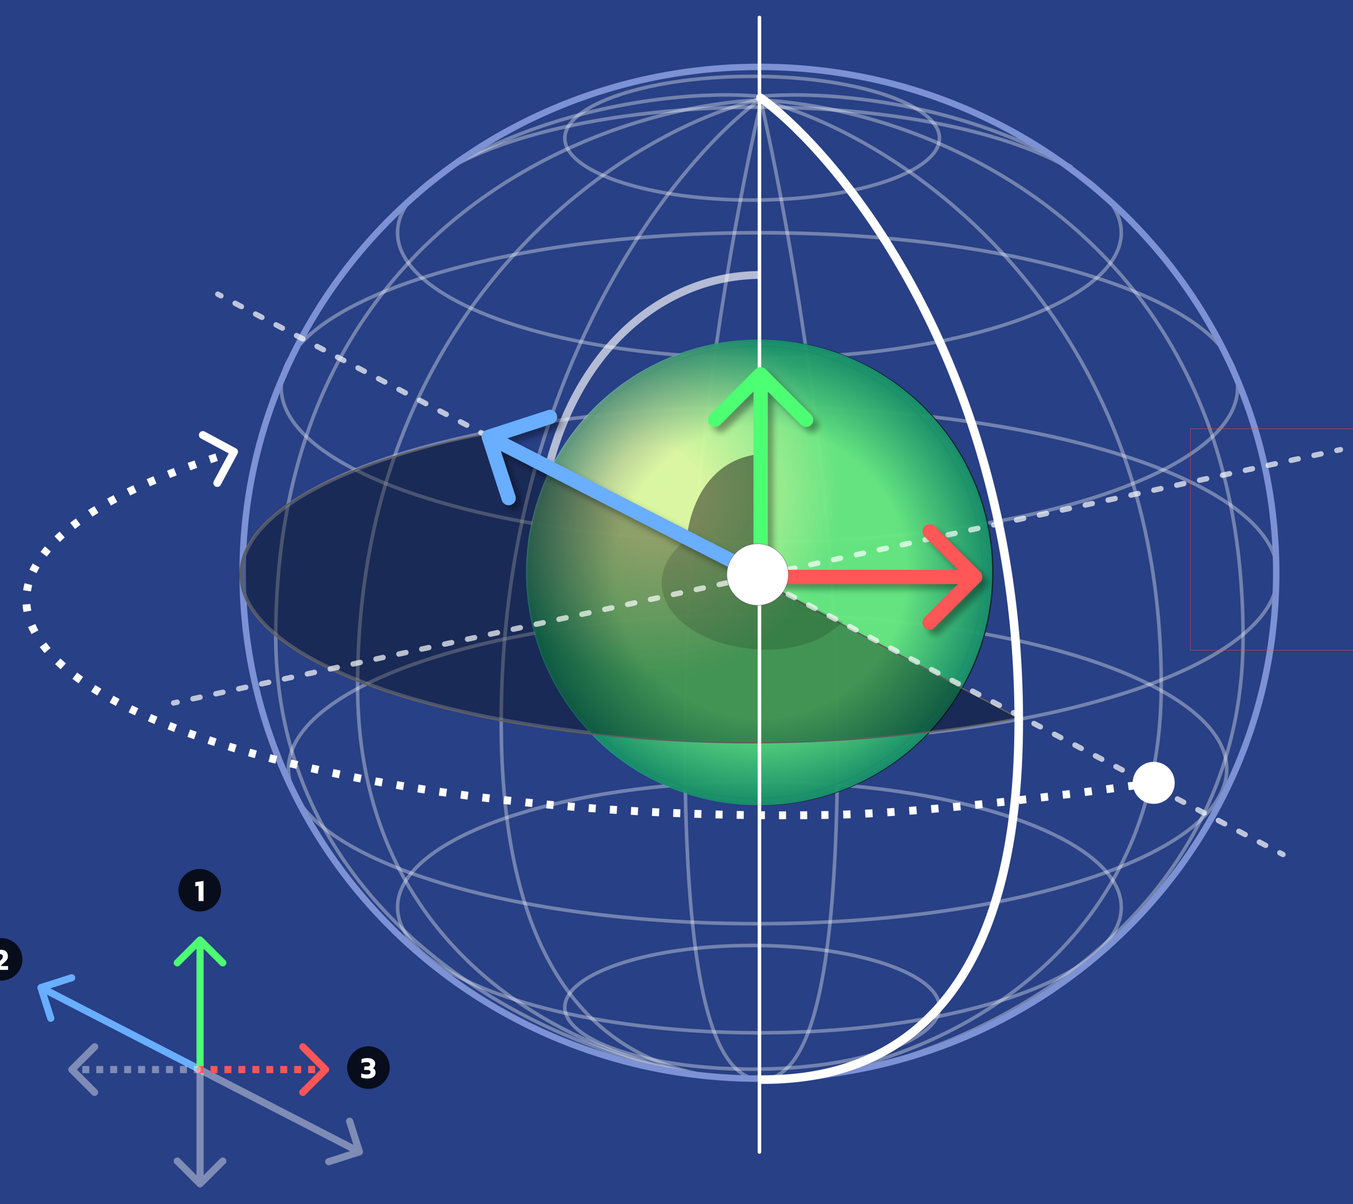
DIAL 1
AMPLITUDE
True vs False
(leaning, somewhat, deeply, absolute: Agree or Disagree)

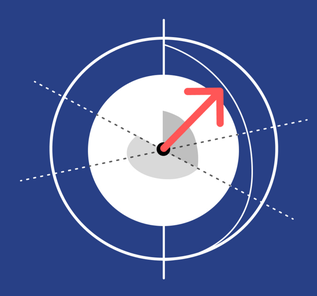


DIAL 2
PHASE
Positioning of the question
(I support the policy vs I oppose the policy)

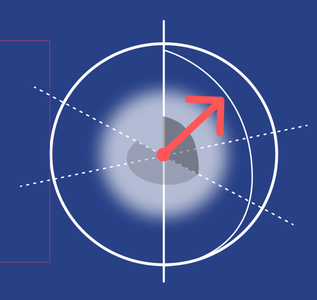


DIAL 3
COHERENCE:
Sharp vs blurry
(Consistent with beliefs vs inconsistent with beliefs)

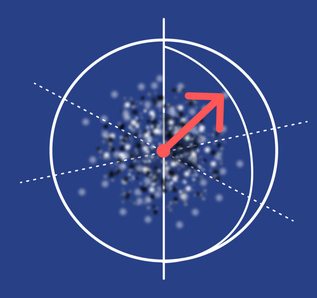




COHERENCE:
Absolute
Beliefs are fully consistent



COHERENCE:
Blurry
Beliefs are partially consistent



COHERENCE:
Fragmented
Beliefs are Inconsistent

THE BELIEF COLOR BAND

Each color bar represents one of the 124 dimensions (see below). Red represents a belief leaning toward disagree, green is uncommitted or a superposition of both, and blue leans toward agree. The number represents the user's position between 1 and 9, with 1 representing disagree and 9 agree. The accompanying character represents their coherence or consistency of commitment.

The Architecture
The Belief Genome maps human worldview across 124 dimensions to form a person's Belief Genome Serial — a portable fingerprint of where a worldview is settled, where it is still in motion, and how it is likely to move.

A BELIEF IN SUPERPOSITION

Holding two opposing beliefs at once on a specific issue. Not because of confusion, but because you're informed and you are practicing reason.

Many times users collapse to uncommitted due to dual beliefs.
